PLEASE READ THIS NOTE

When visiting in offices, I frequently find people who have never seen a copy of our Newsletter or who see it only occasionally. These people say they would like to see it each month.

There is a paper shortage, but even so, the expense would probably prohibit our sending a copy of the Newsletter to each individual employee of the Department in the region we serve. We send out 1700 copies each month, supposedly a copy to each office.

Will you please see that your copy is routed to every one in your office each month? We shall appreciate your cooperation.

NEW BOOKS IN THE LIBRARY

COOPERATIVE COMMUNITIES AT WORK, by H. F. Infield. Dryden Press, 1945. 201p.
282.2 In32

"What will be the 'way out' for the postwar world? How will we solve the problem of resettling and rehabilitating millions of refugees, ruined families, veterans? Is there a 'way out' of the conditions that have led to poverty and war--the struggle for markets, artificial trade barriers, cartels and monopolies, power politics, and the imperialistic policies of a competitive society? Is there any chance that the 'way of cooperation' will be chosen in many parts of the world?

Cooperative Communities at Work tells the story of those groups of people who have already tried 'a way out'--the cooperative way. The author carefully analyzes and compares the cooperative communities of Palestine, Mexico, and the Soviet Union as well as the experiments of the Farm Security Administration and of other groups in the United States. ... Pointing out both the advantages and disadvantages of cooperative living, the author describes the life of these pioneers, their work and their institutions, their social life and culture, their economic and political structure. In his clarification of the lessons to be learned from the successes and failures of these cooperative communities, he offers implicit contributions to the rebuilders of the postwar world."
From the book jacket.

GRASSLAND HUSBANDRY, by H. I. Moore. G. Allen and Unwin, 1943. 112p. 60.1 M78

This small volume was apparently written with the idea of giving British farmers and stockmen the rudiments of the subject. The author discusses the following topics: The history of grassland, Grassland and farm practice, The making of grassland, The improvement of grassland, The breaking of grassland, Preserving grass for winter keep. The book is illustrated with half-page and full-page pictures which aid materially in understanding the text. From the standpoint of pastures in the United States, the bulletins published by our Experiment Stations would be more complete and more applicable to our conditions. (These statements were taken from a review of the book by E. B. Coffman, Agronomist, SCS, Upper Darby, Pa., in our Pennsylvania Branch Library's Newsletter.)

PLOUGHING FOR PASTURE, by H. I. Moore. Longmans Green, 1944. 31p. 60.1 M78P

MANAGEMENT IN HOMES, by E. M. Cushman. Macmillan, 1945. 285p. 321 C95

"The author of this book has presented a method of teaching home management with real homes as the laboratory or the classroom. It is a record of the varied ways in which families have managed to get the kinds of homes they wanted by making the most of their resources. ... The book was written primarily as a text for college students in home management; however, thought was given to the needs of adult study groups such as P. T. A., home demonstration and women's clubs. ... The book is written in an interesting and readable style and is profusely illustrated with photographs and diagrams of problems and solutions." From a review in What's New In Home Economics.

NEW CROPS FOR THE ^{New} WORLD, by C. M. Wilson, editor. Macmillan, 1945. 295p.
31 W69

"In this volume, Mr. Wilson has combined sixteen chapters--each written by a distinguished authority--into a well integrated book dealing with important world crops. The biggest and most beneficial shifting of crops in a century has begun. Here is an exciting look into the present and future of the American tropics; here we see the birth of an entirely new inter-American economy,--an interdependence based, not on gestures and kind words, but on practical action and commerce.

Here is the story of the rubber plantations flourishing in the great South American forests; the story of the essential oils in Brazil and Honduras, ...and the stories of silks from South America, of bamboos, of the developing field of tropical fruits, the breeding of livestock for that area, and accounts of many more essential crops being grown more abundantly in Latin America today than ever before." From the book jacket.

One of the contributors is Albert O. Rhoad, Director of the Iberia Livestock Experiment Farm in Louisiana, whom many of you know.

WHEN WE'RE GREEN WE GROW, by Jane S. McKimmon. Univ. of North Carolina Press, 1945. 353p. 275.2 M21

"It is encouraging to see a book on the home demonstration work of the Agricultural Extension Service. This service, the largest single agency of adult education in the world, has received little publicity...(This is) a folksy kind of story about North Carolina where Mrs. McKimmon was the first home demonstration agent---a book vibrant with sympathy for common people and faith in what they can do...Books on this significant work are long overdue. It is hoped that those which follow will measure up to the high standards of this one." Survey Mid-Monthly, June 1945.

NOTE:

Two older books dealing with the work of the Extension Service are listed below. While not as entertaining as the above book, they give many interesting facts.

Planning For Peace

"What Peace Can Mean To American Farmers: Maintenance of Full Employment." USDA Misc. Pub. No. 570. 1945. 28p. 1 Ag84M 570

This is a sequel to "Post-War Agriculture and Employment", the first in a series under the general title What Peace Can Mean To American Farmers. In issuing this bulletin, Mr. Wickard said, "Even though the present analysis as submitted to me deals with numerous problems that are not strictly within the agricultural field, the action taken by the American people in meeting these problems will have such a profound effect on all agriculture that I am having this study printed so that agricultural agencies dealing with post-war problems, and farm people generally, may have a better understanding of the more important elements of the whole problem."
